How the Civil Service of France Is Recruited-Great Need for Technical Instruction.

Times of yesterday, evoked quite a deal of comment among the foreign delegates that the idea impressed him as a particu-

vice in France through special schools had long been practiced with satisfactory results. Two conditions in the character of the French had contributed powerfully to this result—the great centralization and increase of governmental activities, and the specialization in the system of public in-struction. The American youth attends The American youth attends school and on the completion of his studies determines in what direction he will tuen his epergies. But, so difficult is it to establish oneself in business in France, that the French boy must as the earliest opportanity made a selection of the profession he wishes to follow, and then direct all cation has received a development un equaled by that of any other country of Europe, Switzerland possibly excepted, and to an extent which it would take years of growth for the English or American tecnnical schools to equal. There is not trade, and one might almost say a branch of a trade, which does not have special schools devoted to preparing students for its efficient prosecution. What is true of private business is also true of government activities. The technical branches of government administration have been sidered as professions, to be prepared for as for any other profession.

"One must have lived in France to calize the important part which govern ment plays in the life of the French peo ple. Not only has there been a constant development of the duties usually performed by the central government, but the domain of private business has been entered, and numerous services have been conditions have led to the assumption of the telegraphic, telephonic and, in part, the railway system of the country Economic conditions have long caused the French government to busy Itself with such important interests as forestry and the cultivation of improved breeds of do mestic animals. Financial and other con siderations have led to the assumption by the government of the manufacture petre, special tapestry and porcelain pro-late years on public improvements, reads, bridges, and canals, and these improvements are made more directly by the gov ernment in France than in the United States. All this has not only required a great development of the civil service but also the employment by the state of a large number of men, of whom a high degree of technical skill is required.

"A mong a people where government plays such an important part as in France, and where the government service necessarily absorbs a not inconsiderable part of the workers of the country, the whole school or less extent, the preparation for this actions of Joseph S. Doe, ex-Assistan Secretary of War, was discovered vester lay by the auditor of the Treasury for the War Department. The auditor discovered that Doe had purchased a saddle borse for $150, and he disallowed the claim and tharged it against the Army quartermaster at Chicago. From papers in the possession of the War Department and the auditor It appears that Doe appointed a man named McKinney, of Wisconsin to purchase horse

Assistant Secretary Meiklejohn ney in Chicago, and tuned over to the quar-termaster to ship to Mr. Doe.

The quartermaster supposed the trans-action a proper one, and sent the bill to Assistant Secretary Doe, who wrote that the horse was for the War Department, and ordered that it be shipped as such. The quartermaster thereupon approved the bill as an expenditure for the public service, and the horse was shipped to this

LABOR LEADER RESIGNS

President McHugh, of the Local Federation, Steps Out.

Retires From Office to Promote the Consolidation Scheme-Respected by All.

Mr. James F. McHugh, who for sever terms has been president of the local Federation of Labor, tendered his resignation as the chief executive of that body

In fact, this step only paves the way for a more active part in the advancement of the interests of the workingmen of the

When seen last evening Mr. McHugh said that the sole reason for resigning was to further the scheme of consolidating organized labor in this city. He has always been, he said, an ardent advocate of the single central body idea. Mr. Mc-Hugh said his resignation would in no way interfere with his taking an active i terest in labor work. He will continue to represent his union in the Federation of Labor, and, as a delegate on the floor, will always battle for the rights of the laboring man, no matter what be his trade affiliations.

By the resignation of Mr. Mollingh the nembers of organized labor in the District lose a conscientious advocate. Dur ing his long service in the cause of labor he has won for himself the confidence, not only of his fellow workers, but also the respect of the employers with Whom he was brought into contact.
